

CHÂTEAU SAINT GALIER

(Graves)

Two areas in Bordeaux have benefited more than most from the revolution in winegrowing and winemaking techniques. Saint-Emilion, which has garnered most of the press, and Graves on the other side of the river. Graves, with a lower percentage of Merlot, is not quite as supple as Saint Emilion, but its balance and minerality are unequalled. The Saint Galier is a remarkable bargain: dark plum fruit balanced with a little tannic cut, and mineral undertones. Delicious with lamb.

CHÂTEAU SAINT GALIER

(Graves)

Two areas in Bordeaux have benefited more than most from the revolution in winegrowing and winemaking techniques. Saint-Emilion, which has garnered most of the press, and Graves on the other side of the river. Graves, with a lower percentage of Merlot, is not quite as supple as Saint Emilion, but its balance and minerality are unequalled. The Saint Galier is a remarkable bargain: dark plum fruit balanced with a little tannic cut, and mineral undertones. Delicious with lamb.

CHÂTEAU SAINT GALIER

(Graves)

Two areas in Bordeaux have benefited more than most from the revolution in winegrowing and winemaking techniques. Saint-Emilion, which has garnered most of the press, and Graves on the other side of the river. Graves, with a lower percentage of Merlot, is not quite as supple as Saint Emilion, but its balance and minerality are unequalled. The Saint Galier is a remarkable bargain: dark plum fruit balanced with a little tannic cut, and mineral undertones. Delicious with lamb.

CHÂTEAU SAINT GALIER

(Graves)

Two areas in Bordeaux have benefited more than most from the revolution in winegrowing and winemaking techniques. Saint-Emilion, which has garnered most of the press, and Graves on the other side of the river. Graves, with a lower percentage of Merlot, is not quite as supple as Saint Emilion, but its balance and minerality are unequalled. The Saint Galier is a remarkable bargain: dark plum fruit balanced with a little tannic cut, and mineral undertones. Delicious with lamb.