

SAINT-PEYRE

(Picpoul de Pinet)

The South of France is most commonly associated, vinously speaking, with robust red wine values — Picpoul de Pinet is the great white exception. Appropriate, since these latitudes are the home of some the world’s finest seafood cookery, with which a light, pure white is very welcome. Picpoul, the grape variety, grown near the famous old fishing port of Sète, yields body and crispness as well as deliciously focused flavors of melon, lemon, and smoke.
