

Quinta do Infantado Estate Bottled Port

Grower or Estate Bottled Port. Previously this designation was found only on “single vineyard” bottlings that could fetch as much as vintage port. Quinta do Infantado is not a shipper. It can not buy inferior wine from an industrial style co-operative and sell it under its own label. All its fruit – even for the straight ruby and tawny - comes from its own “A” rated vineyards, and is grown and vinified in an artisanal manner. Longer fermentation of riper and better grapes results in a stronger and drier port, and because the alcohol comes from the grape itself, a smaller addition of wine brandy. The final wine is less “syrupy” and has great finesse and extraordinary flavour.

Quinta do Infantado Estate Bottled Port

Grower or Estate Bottled Port. Previously this designation was found only on “single vineyard” bottlings that could fetch as much as vintage port. Quinta do Infantado is not a shipper. It can not buy inferior wine from an industrial style co-operative and sell it under its own label. All its fruit – even for the straight ruby and tawny - comes from its own “A” rated vineyards, and is grown and vinified in an artisanal manner. Longer fermentation of riper and better grapes results in a stronger and drier port, and because the alcohol comes from the grape itself, a smaller addition of wine brandy. The final wine is less “syrupy” and has great finesse and extraordinary flavour.

Quinta do Infantado Estate Bottled Port

Grower or Estate Bottled Port. Previously this designation was found only on “single vineyard” bottlings that could fetch as much as vintage port. Quinta do Infantado is not a shipper. It can not buy inferior wine from an industrial style co-operative and sell it under its own label. All its fruit – even for the straight ruby and tawny - comes from its own “A” rated vineyards, and is grown and vinified in an artisanal manner. Longer fermentation of riper and better grapes results in a stronger and drier port, and because the alcohol comes from the grape itself, a smaller addition of wine brandy. The final wine is less “syrupy” and has great finesse and extraordinary flavour.

Quinta do Infantado Estate Bottled Port

Grower or Estate Bottled Port. Previously this designation was found only on “single vineyard” bottlings that could fetch as much as vintage port. Quinta do Infantado is not a shipper. It can not buy inferior wine from an industrial style co-operative and sell it under its own label. All its fruit – even for the straight ruby and tawny - comes from its own “A” rated vineyards, and is grown and vinified in an artisanal manner. Longer fermentation of riper and better grapes results in a stronger and drier port, and because the alcohol comes from the grape itself, a smaller addition of wine brandy. The final wine is less “syrupy” and has great finesse and extraordinary flavour.

